Sustainability Assessment

Please provide a self-assessment for each of the following criteria by assigning a ranking from 1 to 10, with 1 indicating no procedures for sustainability in place and 10 indicating demonstrated sustainability best practices in place.

Following each, describe your company's sustainability efforts for that category in 100 words or less. This can include descriptions of conservation efforts in the field or in operations, how waste is avoided, how is it reclaimed, how the winery extends conservation efforts to its customers, or even practices you would like to see established in the future to maintain environmentally sound, socially equitable or economically feasible winemaking principles. Please quantify your statements with data showing improvements from X% to Y%.

As with all great initiatives, we encourage you to be creative and help establish new conservation and sustainable practices and to share that knowledge locally, regionally, nationally and internationally. These initiatives are consistent with both BRIT's mission and FIVS' environmental sustainability principles as outlined in its, "Global Wine Producers Environmental Sustainability Principles".

Glossary:

Ecopreneurial Programs: business practices that aim to achieve a balance between ecosystem stewardship and business performance.

Closing the Loop Programs: business processes of reducing waste with the goal of “zero waste.” Finding methods to reduce, recycle, reuse, and repurpose materials in the waste stream and diverting resources from being landfilled.

Take-Back Programs: programs for tracking a producer’s post-production materials and products and packaging, with a conditional commitment that the producer will reclaim the materials and products at end-of-life. The producer has the goal of recycling, reusing and/or repurposing its materials and products.

Valorization: By-products “valorization” is the possible utilization or re-use of a productive resource from the winegrowing or wine making processes, instead of sending it to the landfill. It could include usage with a value creation (grape seed oil, cosmetics, etc.) or use for improving soil fertility.
